RCGP Person-Centred Care Network of Champions

The RCGP’s Person-Centred Care Network brings together GPs, healthcare professionals and people with lived experience to help make person-centred care a reality by acting as innovators, leaders and influencers. Members of the network are able to exchange ideas and information through an online platform called Basecamp.

The network:

- Promotes person-centred care approaches by providing peer support through sharing resources and case studies as well as providing local and national advice.

- Brings together expertise and emerging personalised care learning for primary care professionals, through sharing and developing learning from champions.

- Influences the national direction of person-centred care and personalised care by:
  - Contributing to RCGP resources and consultations
  - Helping to develop person-centred care standards for primary care
  - Attending and speaking at regional and national events to raise awareness of person-centred approaches

- Meets in-person to explore best practice, discuss challenges provide peer support and enable networking.

To join the network, you need to be working in primary care or have strong links to primary care AND meet the following three criteria:

- You have a strong interest in and are working in personalised care

- You have an interest in being very engaged and will commit to be an active participant

- You are willing to go out and support others (peer support, events) and to help influence
