

THE 2024/2025 ROSE PRIZE

For the best submission in the history of UK general practice/primary care

BIENNIAL PRIZE ESTABLISHED BY THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF GENERAL PRACTITIONERS
and
THE WORSHIPFUL SOCIETY OF APOTHECARIES OF LONDON

- ❖ The Rose Prize has been established to stimulate interest by independent history scholars and increase knowledge in the history of UK general practice/primary care.
- ❖ It commemorates William Rose, a late 17th century apothecary, whose court case of 1701-4 established the legal foundation of General Practice in England and Wales, and Fraser Rose, co-founder of the Royal College of General Practitioners.
- ❖ Submissions for the eleventh Rose prize are now invited.
- ❖ Applications are welcome from individuals and teams with an interest in primary health care and general practice including:
 - Individuals from university departments of the history of medicine
 - Independent historian scholars up to doctoral level
 - Non-medical historians
- ❖ Advice on all aspects of the Prize is available at awards@rcgp.org.uk and entrants are encouraged to contact us in advance if they wish to check on eligibility or for advice.
- ❖ The best submission for the Rose Prize will be awarded:
 - A silver rose bowl with inscribed plinth, which will be kept by the winner/s for the prize tenure of two years
 - A Certificate
 - A prize of £200
 - Two years of Fellows Membership to the Faculty of the History and Philosophy of Medicine and Pharmacy
 - An Associate Membership of the British Society for the History of Medicine
 - Highly Commended certificates and a prize of £100 may be awarded to applicants meeting the required standard but not winning the prize, including one for the best submission by a medical student.

Further details on how to enter

- ❖ Three copies of submissions should be submitted. These may be in any medium, typewritten, written books, audio-visual, electronic, as databases, oral history and radio programmes. (This list is not exhaustive.)
- ❖ Submissions can be on any aspect on the history of UK general practice/primary care – previous winning submissions have included: The 'Letters to No-one' and the Retirement Oral History – Legacy of a Glasgow GP by Dr Kenneth Collins. A book based on this is shortly to be published. Dr Stephen Gillam won the last Rose Prize for The Changing Gaze of the General Practitioner.
- ❖ Written submissions should follow a scholarly format. They should normally be between 3,000-6,000 words long (excluding references, tables, figures, captions and bibliography). The word limit includes footnotes and endnotes. Submissions should be fully referenced. Indexing is optional and does not count towards the word-length.
- ❖ With static submissions, e.g., museum displays, a video presentation of 5-10 minutes should be also included.
- ❖ Quotations from any source, including the internet, is acceptable only when quotation marks are used to indicate their full extent, and full citation(s) given in the references. Plagiarism is not acceptable and if detected would lead to disqualification.
- ❖ Copyright will remain with the author. There may be opportunities for publishing the winning submission. It will be included on both organisations' websites and sent to the assistant Editor of the British Journal of General Practice for consideration. If it is subsequently published, reference should be made to the Rose Prize.
- ❖ Any sponsorship must be declared and approved as acceptable.

How to submit your application and adjudication

- ❖ Please send three copies of your submission to awards@rcgp.org.uk. Following adjudication, a copy of each application will be kept by both organisations to retain in their archives or libraries.
- ❖ In the case of museum displays or similar advice should be sought on possible ways of presenting these.
- ❖ Submissions should be accompanied by (1) a signed disclaimer to certify the originality of the work and the eligibility of the applicant(s) and, if applicable (2) a letter confirming joint responsibility. General Data Protection Regulations (GDPR) will apply.
- ❖ The closing date for applications is 1 November 2024 and the eleventh Rose Prize will be awarded at a ceremony in 2025.
- ❖ The prize is adjudicated by three examiners, one from The Worshipful Society of Apothecaries, one from the Royal College of General Practitioners and one independent professional historian.
- ❖ All applicants will be notified of the result of the competition via email by January 2024.
- ❖ The examiners' decision will be final, and correspondence cannot be entered into regarding the result of the competition.
- ❖ The prize will not be awarded if there is not a submission judged to be of sufficient merit.
